South County EDC Rolls Out Business Incentive Matrix for San Diego

Incentives are part of Propel San Diego, building a resilient defense industry

CHULA VISTA – South County Economic Development Council (SCEDC) is launching a Business Incentive Matrix to help defense companies grow and thrive.

“We’re excited to provide these resources to defense-related businesses throughout South County and San Diego in general,” said Sally Preston, SCEDC chair. “The defense industry is a vital component of San Diego’s economy. We’re happy to work with these companies to make sure they have a home in the region as they grow and continue to develop advanced military technologies.”

The matrix outlines the major incentives SCEDC compiled while surveying cities, utilities and government entities throughout San Diego County, and is intended to assist companies with expanding and hiring in the San Diego region. It includes fee reductions, rebates, financing opportunities, expedited processing, employer training reimbursements and assistance. The incentives are offered by various jurisdictions and requirements to obtain incentives vary with each incentive.

SCEDC urges businesses throughout the region to take advantage of local incentives.

“We’re here to help businesses grow and thrive throughout South County,” said Cindy Gompper-Graves, president and CEO of SCEDC. “We have many resources and encourage businesses looking to grow to reach out to South County EDC and our partners for assistance.”

The incentives listed in the matrix are part of Propel San Diego – a Department of Defense (DoD) funded grant initiative intended to develop a resilient defense supply chain in the San Diego region. In addition to the variety of incentives listed on the matrix, companies can contact Propel San Diego Partners for additional business tools, resources or information.
